Notable features:

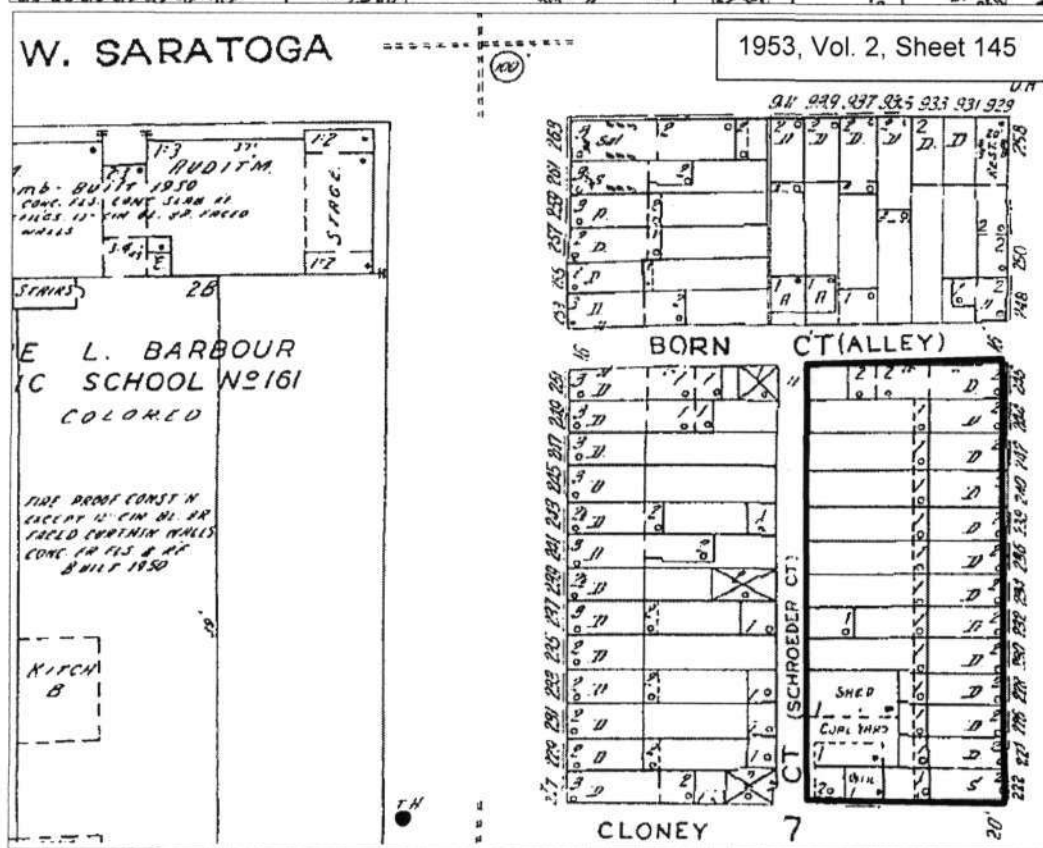

Carefully cared for little houses in a quiet and pleasant area. Most have wood sills and lintels, wood steps and the basement door under the front stoop. There seems to be a lot of pride on the part of residents in this block. The structure at 248 has been removed; the old stables on Cloney Street have been converted to garages.

Environmental context:

Quiet street, opposite Poe Homes, with all its greenery and low-scaled housing. A pretty street, even prettier now that flower boxes are out and steps have been repainted as a part of the Flower Street program. The rear yards are used more than most for flowers, trees, umbrellas, picnic tables and the like.
